

Hi, my name is Lori J. Peterson, and I'd like to introduce you to

The New Me

My first published work is a personal memoir of my journey after a traumatic brain injury. Before my injury, I was the Executive Director for three non-profit neuroscience organizations for over ten years. The very same research that those organizations produced helped save my life. Recovery from my TBI was a long, complicated, and difficult process, but not one without hope. In my memoir, I share about the lessons of faith, love, and family that I learned on my journey.

While my TBI had knocked me back into a near-infant state, I have gone on to stay hands-on in raising my children, relearn how to walk, then run a 10k, pass the LSAT and be admitted into law school, and become a librarian and published author. By sharing my story I hope it reaches those who may need to hear it most.

I would love to come speak to your community and share my story. My goal is to bring hope to every reader and spread awareness of the realities, and successes, of living with a traumatic brain injury.
